European Forum for Architectural Policies, PFUE 2008

event organized on the initiative and under the aegis of the Ministry for Culture and Communication, France in the framework of the French presidency of the European Union

Bordeaux, arc en rêve centre d'architecture, 09-10 October 2008

With this conference, open to professionals from all over Europe, the European Forum for Architectural Policies, in association with arc en rêve centre d'architecture in Bordeaux, aims to foster an exchange of knowledge and skills, focusing on the issue of sustainable development. The objective is to formulate critical appraisals, encourage new ways of thinking and develop new practical approaches. The resulting exchanges will inform both modes of governance and architectural and urban policies.

How can we refashion the processes of architectural creativity in the context of globalisation and the age of sustainable development? What can we do differently in the way we make cities? How can we rethink our metropolitan areas? How can we make density more people-friendly? How can architecture reach beyond standardised norms? What programmes and projects should we choose, and for what purposes?

The workshops will be held consecutively and divided into two parts. First, architects will present case studies on the chosen theme. Following this, points of view from experts, critics, researchers, designers and other key people in planning will open the discussion.

> 10.30-13.00 workshop 1 > CONCEIVING METROPOLITAN TERRITORIES : FROM EXPANSION TO DENSIFICATION

How can we rethink the notion of density and contain urban sprawl in answer to the demands of sustainable development today? What are the various contradictory solutions and approaches open to us? Should we be speaking in terms of densification, concentration, proximity and centrality? How can we approach the question of tower blocks? And what about the opposition between town centre and suburbs? Or the relationship between countryside and city? What about landscape urbanism? Should we be thinking in terms of bringing nature into the city or the city into nature? What about the architecture of and in our cities? In what ways can architecture contribute to the intrinsically urban nature of our times? If architecture is invested with a new role in our cities, is it beginning to symbolise something different? Is it an integral part of a political project? Is it a crucial factor in creating a new personality for our cities, in tune with the modern age?

> 14.30-17.00 workshop 2 > BUILDING SUSTAINABLY : CHANGING VIEWS OF URBAN PROJECTS AND ARCHITECTURE

The analysis of production systems encourages us to reconsider the current methods used in developing, planning and building our cities. How can we form a meaningful definition of what "sustainable construction" can really mean? Can we go on building without using up valuable resources? Should we be building less? How can we build better? What should we be doing with existing buildings? How can we devise new methods for determining a building's design? How can we encourage flexibility and functional versatility? What critical analysis can we present of eco-constructions? How can we change the way we think about quality? How can we implement new processes for architectural work? How can we make building sustainably the cornerstone of our plans for the society of tomorrow?
